

BRITISH JOURNAL OF PREVENTIVE AND SOCIAL MEDICINE

The Journal is primarily concerned with the problems of public health and their solution. The field of interest includes studies of the distribution and behaviour of disease in human populations; the definition of the agents responsible for the patterns observed; the consideration of the modifying effect of social or environmental conditions on disease evolution; and the assessment of the health and efficiency of people exposed to various external circumstances. Linked with these subjects is the design of measures intended to control or prevent disease and the field assessment of their value in public health practice. Preventive and Social Medicine also encompasses the objective study of the organization and functioning of medical services with particular emphasis on the measurement of their efficiency.

A NEW JOURNAL

Though there are two journals published in English that are devoted to heredity in man, there is no journal confined to medical genetics, and papers on the subject have been scattered over a wide number of specialized medical journals. With the increasing interest in medical genetics it is felt that the time has come for a journal devoted to this new and growing speciality.

JOURNAL OF MEDICAL GENETICS

It is intended that this journal should be broadly based and that papers should appear not only on clinical studies but also on the statistical, pathological, cytological and biochemical and other aspects. Although the journal will be mainly concerned with human genetics, occasional animal studies will be published where they are relevant. In addition, authoritative review articles will appear at fairly regular intervals.

The first quarterly number of this Journal was published in September, 1964. In the first volume there will be two numbers (September and December). In subsequent volumes, starting in 1965, there will be four numbers published in March, June, September and December. Each issue will contain some 70 pages of text.
